

110

Number of Respondents

Zambia's Intercity Bus Travel Is Still Largely Offline

Today, booking an intercity bus ticket in Zambia is still an offline and frustrating experience. Our survey found that just over 79% of travellers still go to the station just to buy a ticket, while almost 30% of users reported wasting time and money traveling to stations as the major pain point.

Booking Method

Pain Points

Wasting time/money traveling to the station just to buy a ticket	29.96
Poor safety/security at the station	21.01
Uncertainty about departure times	21.01
Lack of seat availability when I arrive	14.01
Limited payment options (cash only)	14.01
Total	100.00

Travelers Are Ready for a Better Booking Experience

Despite the availability of mobile technology and digital payments, travellers still face queues, uncertainty about seat availability, and unclear bus departure times. Fortunately, the survey also revealed that travellers are ready for change.

50% of respondents said they would use Lyne as their default booking method, showcasing strong demand for a platform that makes travel simpler, faster, and more reliable. In addition, Almost 74% of respondents showed willingness to pay an extra fee to book bus tickets online in order to save time and money.

Booking Platform Usage

I would use it every time I travel	50.00
I would likely use it for most trips	31.82
I might use it depending on the bus operator	15.45
I would rarely use it (I prefer the station)	1.82
I would never use it	0.91
Total	100.00

Willingness to pay a fee

Zambia’s Busiest Routes Create a Powerful Entry Market

Travel demand is largely concentrated around three main routes; Lusaka–Kitwe/Ndola, Lusaka–Solwezi, and Lusaka–Livingstone creating a focused and scalable launch opportunity. Furthermore, over 31% of respondents identified choosing exactly where they sit as the most important booking feature, highlighting the importance of convenience, control, and certainty in the travel experience.

Routes

Booking Features

Seat Selection: Choosing exactly where I sit (Window or Aisle)	31.27
Live Tracking: Seeing exactly where the bus is on a map.	25.82
Travel Protection: Paying an extra K5 – K10 for luggage insurance and accident cover.	25.45
Refreshments: Pre-ordering a drink or snack for the trip.	17.45
Total	99.99

Mobile Money Creates a Fast Path to Adoption

Mobile money dominated payment preferences, signalling faster integration opportunities for the platform ahead of bank cards and other payment methods. Airtel Money emerged as the leading mobile money service, presenting a unique business opportunity for strategic partnerships and streamlined digital payments.

Payment Methods

Interest Is Already Translating Into Early Adoption

Most importantly, respondents did not just express interest almost 30% voluntarily shared their WhatsApp numbers for early access, demonstrating real intent to adopt the product.

The Market Is Ready to Book on Lyne

Today, booking an intercity bus ticket in Zambia is still an offline and frustrating experience. Our survey found that just over 79% of travellers still go to the station just to buy a ticket, while 30% of users reported wasting time and money traveling to stations as a major pain point.

Despite the availability of mobile technology and digital payments, travellers still face queues, uncertainty about seat availability, and unclear bus departure times. Fortunately, the survey also revealed that travellers are ready for change.

50% of respondents said they would use Lyne as their default booking method, showcasing strong demand for a platform that makes travel simpler, faster, and more reliable. In addition, 74% of respondents showed willingness to pay an extra fee to book bus tickets online in order to save time and money.

Mobile money dominated payment preferences, signalling faster integration opportunities for the platform ahead of bank cards and other payment methods. Airtel Money emerged as the leading mobile money service, presenting a unique business opportunity for strategic partnerships and streamlined digital payments.

Travel demand is largely concentrated around three main routes; Lusaka–Kitwe/Ndola, Lusaka–Solwezi, and Lusaka–Livingstone creating a focused and scalable launch opportunity. Furthermore, over 31% of respondents identified choosing exactly where they sit as the most important booking feature, highlighting the importance of convenience, control, and certainty in the travel experience.

Most importantly, respondents did not just express interest, almost 30% voluntarily shared their WhatsApp numbers for early access, demonstrating real intent to adopt the product.